To Whom It May Concern,

I am writing this letter as the CEO of streamways ApS to confirm the successful completion of an internship by Paul Schlenzig at our company. Our company develops cutting-edge software solutions for mobility education and ERP systems for driving schools primarily in Germany.

Paul supported a key project at our company, focusing on adapting our ERP software for a new market and country in collaboration with one of the largest driving school chains in Europe. He contributed during the "Conceptualization Phase," the first and critical stage of the project. This phase spanned three months, from June 1st to August 31st, and Paul played an integral role in conducting user research to gather essential requirements for tailoring our existing software to meet the needs of the new market and our customer.

Paul organized and facilitated a series of workshops using Figma, where he mapped out the customer's overall needs and iteratively refined the requirements in two-week sprints. He was responsible for creating screen designs that illustrated the adapted UI and UX flows, demonstrating his understanding of user-centered design principles. By the end of this phase, Paul successfully produced a comprehensive overview of the necessary requirements and generated development tickets using Jira. His contributions resulted in a clear set of specifications for the software adaptation, as well as an estimated timeline and workload for the subsequent development phase of the project.

Throughout his internship, Paul demonstrated a strong technical aptitude and valuable soft skills. His teamwork, communication, and problem-solving abilities were evident, and he collaborated effectively with our team and stakeholders. Paul was reliable, punctual, and quickly adapted to our company environment, consistently delivering high-quality work.

In conclusion, Paul completed his internship at streamways with great success, achieving the desired outcomes and making a meaningful contribution to the project. I have no doubt that Paul will continue to excel in his future endeavors, and I highly recommend him for any opportunity that aligns with his skillset.

Sincerely,

Christian Karstoft
